ASRT Fellows Handbook

I. Purpose, History and Expectations

Purpose

Fellow is an honorary designation representing a significant breadth and depth of contribution to the ASRT and the medical imaging and radiation therapy profession. A Fellow is an exemplary leader who has consistently served, advocated for and supported advancement of the profession.

History

ASRT initiated the Fellows category to celebrate professionals who are dedicated to the society and who have contributed unselfishly to the profession. The Society recognized that qualifying for this honor required significant contribution through personal excellence and an interest in technologist advancement through active educational endeavors, society activities and written papers. In 1956, 12 technologists composed the first class to be elevated to Fellow. These charter Fellows not only represented the Society's great achievers, but they also emulated the diversity of the profession during that time. Among those first Fellows were chief technologists, educators, executive directors, Catholic nuns and former society presidents. All shared a common desire to advance technologists and, in doing so, attained unprecedented achievements for themselves and the profession.

From the beginning, Fellows have committed to the advancement of the profession at the affiliate, state, national and international levels. The Committee on Fellows recommends that qualified individuals be recognized and celebrated during the Fellows elevation ceremony at the ASRT Annual Governance and House of Delegates Meeting. During the ceremony, a summary of their professional background and contributions are presented. A medallion, pin and certificate are presented to newly elevated Fellows.

Expectations

Fellows are expected to function as a role model and mentor to other professionals and encourage them to expand their involvement with the ASRT and the medical imaging and radiation therapy profession. In that role, they also are expected to inspire, promote and demonstrate a strong work ethic that includes continuous advocacy, personal growth and achievement of career goals. Lastly, Fellows are expected to acknowledge other outstanding medical imaging and radiation therapy professionals who support the ASRT and the profession by sponsoring these individuals who apply for inclusion in the elite group called Fellows.
